

Deputy Sheriff Promotional Corporal/Sergeant Examination Study Guide

West Virginia
Division of Personnel

OVERVIEW

This examination study guide was developed specifically to assist you with test preparation, in understanding the different components of the examination, and to provide you with sample exam questions.

You will need to allot up to three (3) hours for the examination. All scoring for the Promotional Corporal/Sergeant Exam will be performed by the Division of Personnel (DOP). The DOP will forward to the county a list of examinees and the score percentage each received.

WHAT IS ON THE EXAM?

The exam consists of 112 questions covering the following areas:

- Supervision and Training (24 Questions)
- Crew Scheduling Exercise (5 Questions)
- Technical Job Knowledge (32 Questions)
- Law Enforcement Practices (26 Questions)
- Effective Working Relationships (25 Questions)

Supervision and Training

In this portion of the exam, the questions will involve principles and practices of supervision such as planning, organization, and situations that supervising officers may encounter.

Sample Questions

1. Which one of the following best states why it is generally more preferable for a supervisor to reprimand an Officer in a private meeting than by a public reprimand?
 - a. Public reprimand may impair the morale of the officer.
 - b. Private reprimand makes a deeper impression on the officer.
 - c. Reprimand, if it is to be effective, must be impartial and impersonal.
 - d. Public reprimand is more suitable for a group of two or three persons than for a single officer.
 - e. Private reprimand can be accomplished more quickly and saves the time for both the officer and the supervisor.

2. A supervisor may control a police force either through respect or through fear. Which one of the following is the most important reason why modern police authorities believe that command should be based on respect rather than fear?
 - a. Respect is easier for the supervisor to develop.
 - b. Respect is an individual trait and fear is an organizational trait.
 - c. Respect motivates every officer, but fear motivates only cowards.
 - d. Research has determined that negative incentives are more effective than positive ones.
 - e. Loyalty based on respect makes officers do more and better work than the minimum needed to get by.

3. As a supervisor you notice that two of your officers do consistently better work than the other officers. These two officers are good friends but are not cordial with the other officers. As a supervisor, what is the best approach to take?

- a. Carry on as usual unless the situation becomes a problem.
 - b. Condemn the officers for their behavior.
 - c. Schedule a staff meeting and discuss the situation.
 - d. Point out the disadvantages of not being friendly.
4. A supervisor must give an order they know will be very disliked, because it concerns personal conduct. However, the supervisor also knows that the order is necessary. Which one of the following is the best way for the supervisor to convey the order?
- a. To post the order without any comment.
 - b. To post the order, and give the impression that it will not be enforced.
 - c. To read the order to the officers, and point out the need for the order.
 - d. To read the order to the officers, but refuse to discuss it or comment on it.
 - e. To read the order to the officers, and emphasize the fact that the supervisor was told to issue it.
5. One of the supervisor's most productive officers was insubordinate to the supervisor. Now, it is time to evaluate the performance of personnel, and, even though the incident was properly dealt with, it still upsets the supervisor. Which one of the following approaches to rating the performance of this officer is most generally in accordance with good supervisory principles?
- a. To rate the officer without considering the incident.
 - b. To give the officer a low rating, as insubordination cannot be tolerated.
 - c. To rate the officer high, but for the supervisor to tell the officer the insubordination may be considered on future evaluations.
 - d. To take the incident into account, but not let it overshadow a long period of superior performance.

- e. To inform the officer that the incident will not be reflected in the evaluation, but that he/she may receive additional discipline for it.

6. The following steps are used in making decisions:

1. Investigate the facts
2. Protecting critical information
3. Clarify the problem

The correct order of these steps are

- a. 1, 2, 3
- b. 3, 2, 1
- c. 2, 1, 3
- d. 1, 3, 2

CREW SCHEDULING EXERCISE

In this portion of the test, the questions are designed to test your ability to schedule officers. Use the chart below to make notes. HINT: Fill in the calendar chart completely before attempting to answer the questions. NOTE: Make sure the two shifts are covered for all days in the month.

Write a letter (A, B, or C) in each space according to the information below.

Due to a backlog of work in the department, you must schedule the work hours of 9 officers assigned to 3 crews, 3 officers on each crew, and 1 crew per shift. The job duties require 16-hour coverage 7 days per week.

Each crew works 5 consecutive days per shift and then has 2 days off - with the exception noted below.

The crews change shifts according to the following schedule rules:

After a crew works the first shift (8-4) for 5 days, the crew rotates to the second shift (4-12), and then back to the first shift again, etc. All hours per shift are counted as work hours.

The calendar chart shows a four-week period beginning on the 2nd and ending on the 29th of the month.

Crew A begins work for 5 days on the 4-12 shift on Thursday the 6th.

Crew B begins work for 5 days on the 8-4 shift on Tuesday the 4th.

Crew C begins work for 5 days on the 8-4 shift on Sunday the 9th.

EXCEPTION: After a crew has worked the 4-12 shift, that crew has 3 days off before returning to work on the first shift (8-4).
